Electronic scene in the Czech Republic is a vivid and immensely vital, yet unjustly overlooked by the world cultural centers. The exact evidence of the uniqueness of the local electronic music is Floex's second album Zorya.

Intimate and enjoyable set of compositions, centered around clarinet and piano are accompanied by Tomáš Dvořák's electronic wizardry. Number of acoustic instruments played by guest musicians from different parts of the World were incorporated with insight into the train and significantly developed its track. Would hardly be Casanova without the trumpet of Slovak jazz mastermind Oskar Török, Precious Creature without the vocal of Minneapolis based singer and actor James Rone, Veronika's Dream without the violoncello of Berlin philharmonic member Tomáš Jamník and Nel Blu without the empathic vocal of Marinella Mastrosimone of Italian electronic stars Musetta.

Album which takes Slavic night guard goddess "Zorya Polunochnaya" as symbol, explores deeper, subconscious and nightly moods of the music. Despite its soundtrack aura, this may be Floex's most energetic album up to date - very adventurous, ecstatic and almost storytelling. Sounding as contemporary as it is evocative of another time and place. Musica nocturna of these days and especially nights!

Tomáš Dvořák (*78) aka Floex - clarinetist, composer, producer and multimedia artist from Prague (Czech Republic). While Tomáš solo works are released under his Floex moniker, the soundtracks are released under his own name Tomáš Dvořák. Floex's debut CD Pocustone has been awarded in electronic music category in Czech Music Academy Awards (2002), nominated to European Awards (Qwartz) in the discovery category (2004). He is well known for his cooperation with Amanita Design on the soundtracks for the games Samorost 2 (2006) and Machinarium (2009). Machinarium OST gained heavy reaction by both fans and critics and was selected as the best 2009 soundtrack according World's number one PC game magazine - PC Gamer.
